CHAIRMAN’S MESSAGE

“The Board of Directors, its Committees, and the Staff of Fly Fishers International remain dedicated to preserving fly fishing opportunities for members and the community around the world. We preserve “The Legacy of Fly Fishing for All Fish, All Waters”! We accomplish the mission through our conservation vigilance and actions for the proper conservation of our natural systems that support fishes as well as with the excellent educational materials we make available through the FFI Learning Center. But really it is you, the member, who makes preserving this Legacy possible through your support of FFI. More important is what each of us does and says as fly fishers that make a difference. Fly fishing is our Legacy to preserve and that is what we are doing!”

— Tom H. Logan, Chairman, FFI Board of Directors

OUR MISSION

The Mission of FFI is to support, enhance and preserve fly fishing opportunities. Fundamental to this mission is FFI’s commitment to support conservation, education, and programs to support the fly fishing community.

STRATEGIC VISION

Fly Fishers International will expand its relevance as the definitive voice for fly fishers of all fish in all waters around the world. We strive to be recognized as a leader in conservation of fishes and their habitats, for our excellence in fly fishing education and support of the fly fishing community.
AN EXCITING YEAR

In this same report from a year ago, former President and CEO Len Zickler provided an enthusiastic account of the ongoing transformation of FFI over the last five years. Building on that solid foundation, this past year has seen a whirlwind of activity as we continue to propel the organization forward with exciting and inspiring new initiatives and programs.

A compelling and visible illustration of FFI’s evolution came, of all things, as a response to the COVID-19 pandemic. We knew that meetings, workshops, and gatherings of FFI clubs and councils, along with casting events sponsored by FFI HQ, would have to be postponed or canceled. In our effort to protect public health and safety, our members would be disconnected from their community of fellow fly fishers.

FFI moved quickly to develop a series of live webcasts on casting, tying, conservation, fly fishing skills, and global fly fishing quests—bringing the FFI experience to our members and the broader fly fishing community. A team of dedicated volunteers set to work and quickly developed a series of captivating episodes that drew viewers from around the globe. The response has been remarkable, and it has become clear that live, online content from FFI will be around for the foreseeable future.

We will be launching a comprehensive initiative to improve the FFI membership experience. The results of a professionally designed membership survey, the integration of a new membership database and platform, and new incentives and strategies for membership recruitment and retention has culminated into an overhaul of membership benefits and services. The question of “what’s in it for me” is finally getting answered.

Perhaps the most exciting development in the growth of the FFI community has been the explosion of FFI Women Connect. This dynamic new program has already been successful in cultivating connections among women and fly fishing-related entities that support women fly fishers. Ultimately, the goal is to create a community of women fly fishers where learning and sharing experiences provide a launchpad for developing more leaders among FFI’s councils and clubs as well as the fly fishing industry at large. The leadership of FFI Women Connect are crafting strategic actions to bring the program out to clubs and councils across the FFI landscape.

A new development with regard to the FFI community was the decision to retire the traditional FFI Expo and transform that model into regional expos by partnering with councils. The goal is to bring the FFI Expo experience to different locations around the country and share the excitement and educational opportunities with our members and their communities. Due to concerns about the ongoing pandemic, we chose to pause the regional expo until 2022, but we are excited to get this up and running.

We hope you’ve noticed the effort to improve and enhance FFI communication. In addition to the FFI Online series, the newly designed Flyfisher magazine, and the addition of a new communication piece, “The Dispatch,” we continue to update and redesign the FFI website. In 2021 you’ll see a more dynamic and vibrant portal for the FFI Learning Center for delivery of our world class fly fishing education tools.

Lastly, we were very honored to announce the creation of a new legacy giving program for FFI, The Lee and Joan Wulff Legacy Circle. This program, named after individuals who have contributed so much to the sport of fly fishing and FFI, exists to inspire our members to leave a legacy for the sport that has changed their lives. We hope you will become a part of it.

There is a lot in motion and much more to come. We look forward to the continued engagement and support of our members, clubs, and councils as we write this new chapter for FFI.

PATRICK BERRY, President & CEO
Fly Fishers International stands alone in advocating for the conservation and protection of all fish in all waters. We protect our members’ fly fishing legacy through grants to FFI councils and clubs as well as partner organizations that support habitat restoration and preservation, conservation education, and research in warm water, cold water, and saltwater fisheries. FFI also advocates for sound, science-based conservation policy by writing or signing onto letters to policy makers on important fisheries conservation issues. Here are some significant contributions FFI has made to conservation.

CONSERVATION ACTIONS

Fly Fishers International works to preserve and protect fishery habitats. Many times, that protection comes in the form of biological opinion regarding policies and decisions by public agencies whose responsibility is to oversee the water body and surrounding habitat. We base our decisions about issues on review of the existing policies or laws governing the agency’s action and sound science-based facts.

FFI endeavors to expand our relevance by partnering with many other like-minded conservation organizations to protect habitats and waters around the world by monitoring and acting upon dozens of conservation decisions that affect us around the world. It is only with your support of FFI that the effectiveness of our conservation work is possible.

We are working to protect Bristol Bay in Alaska, the Boundary Waters Wilderness in Minnesota, and spawning habitat in the Florida Keys. Moreover, we have joined with others in addressing the impacts of climate change, protecting access to public lands, and many other issues. Fly fishers’ voices would go unheard without your support!
SCHOLARSHIPS

FFI awarded scholarships to outstanding students in 2019 who are studying in the field of fisheries and their habitats:

» EMILY DEAN is a fourth-year Ph.D. student in the Department of Fisheries and Wildlife at Michigan State University. Her research interests and career goals are “to promote the conservation and protection of stream fishes.” She plans to use her scholarship to assist in funding a project focused on the conservation of migratory game fish species in the Great Lakes region.

» NICOLE WATSON is also a Ph.D. candidate at Michigan State University in the Department of Fisheries and Wildlife. She says, “Native fisheries conservation and restoration is a primary passion of mine. As a fly fisher, I strive to focus on how my work can expand our understanding and appreciation of native, wild trout.” Nicole’s research involves young Arctic Grayling, Brook, and Brown trout and it is part of a wider effort by the Michigan Department of Natural Resources and many partner groups, including FFI, to reintroduce the Arctic Grayling to Michigan streams where it was once native.

» ALEX ORFINGER was awarded the LaFontaine Aquatic Entomology Scholarship. He is a Ph.D. student in aquatic entomology at the University of Florida and Florida A & M University, co-advised by Drs. Andrew Rasmussen (a caddisfly specialist) and Raymond Hix (an applied aquatic entomologist). His research sought to revise the larval taxonomy of a group of caddisflies endemic to the Southeastern United States. Mr. Orfinger is still working on this project and hopes to employ the assistance of citizen scientists sometime in the future.

Fly Fishers International has been dedicated to the support and enhancement of fly fishing opportunities for more than 50 years. Education remains fundamental to how we pursue this mission as our members continue to share their skills and talents with fly fishers across the country and around the world.

EDUCATION HIGHLIGHTS

THE EDUCATION COMMITTEE has welcomed new members who represent FFI councils from around the US—the five new council representatives have already provided an essential perspective to our discussions and decisions, and we’re looking forward to expanding our work through these close partnerships with councils.

EDUCATION GRANTS are one way that FFI impacts individuals and communities. Through the granting of funds to encourage education about all aspects of fly fishing, FFI, in partnership with sponsoring clubs, councils, and related organizations, continues to bring foundational information to new audiences and more in-depth instruction to already adept fly fishers. This year, the Oregon Council, Northern California Council, and Southern Councils have all led the way in their support of requests for Education Grants.

THE LEARNING CENTER continues to provide high quality educational and instructional material to FFI members and the greater fly fishing community. We’ve seen a notable increase this year in people utilizing the Learning Center resources—particularly as part of FFI Online, which will continue in the fall of 2020. The Learning Center curriculum continues to grow, with many materials launched this year and more in the development stage. Of particular note is the Leadership Development Workshop, which is scheduled for fall and will provide meaningful programming for FFI council and club leadership.

The new FLY FISHING SKILLS EDUCATION AWARD was awarded to two recipients in 2019: Fanny Krieger and the Oregon Council of FFI.
Bruce Williams, formerly Secretary of the Casting Board of Governors, became Chair in March of 2019. Bruce has established four planks which will guide and support his tenure as chair: Collegiality, Collaboration, Communication, and Transparency.

Within the CASTING INSTRUCTOR CERTIFICATION PROGRAM (CICP), Jonathan Walter, Chair of the North American and International Events Committees, organized Instructor Certification events into regularly scheduled regional events throughout the year. In 2019, there were nine events, and 73 tests administered. While all remaining 2020 events are canceled, the planning process has been streamlined so that when COVID-19 restrictions are eased, events can be quickly rescheduled. Canceled events were planned for Australia, New Zealand, UK, Germany, Poland, and Italy—a good indication of how international our casting program has become.

The TEST COMMITTEE, chaired by Steve Hollensed, has been collecting survey data from candidates since 2018. Based on results, the CBOG approved the committee’s request to modify the existing THCI exam and elevate it to a Master Level exam. A new THCI exam is in the final approval stage—this exam is equivalent to the single-handed CI exam and is more focused on currently popular shooting-head systems. Currently, there are 83 Validated Examiners worldwide, and 26 participants working toward Level One validation.

In addition to our focus on the Casting Instructor Certification Program, the casting community has devoted considerable time and effort to developing materials for the Learning Center. These include a growing inventory of instructional videos, as well as sponsoring and enhancing the very popular Casting Skills Challenge.

The COVID-19 pandemic has propelled the casting community to expand our use of technology to aid in casting instruction. The CICP has offered continuing education through online webinars and there is also a program in place to conduct casting education webinars for the general public. In addition, online versions of CI Boot Camp, mentoring, and video-based casting analysis have been created.

Finally, in response to needs addressed in ongoing surveys, and through dialog with the FFI Board of Directors, the CBOG has drafted a comprehensive new Strategic Plan to guide us into the future. While the near term poses some obvious challenges, we are excited about our opportunities to enhance the sport of fly fishing.
COVID-19 threw us a curveball and we quickly realized that we needed to look at new ways to support our members. FFI Online offered a perfect platform through which our FTG was able to help share different fly tying techniques with a larger audience than ever before. We feel this is a great new direction for all of us and we plan to continue producing quality materials for all fly tiers. As a response to the unique challenges this year has brought, we’ve begun storyboarding a “how-to” for online fly tying instructions. We’ve learned, in our efforts to bring distraction to people during this time of confinement, that fly tying continues to be a great tool to bring people together and lighten things up.

As the FTG further embraced the FFI ethos of “All Fish, All Waters”, a committee was formed to start creating a Saltwater Fly Tying Manual. This manual, currently under review, features 20 flies with step-by-step photos and directions.

The Fly Tying Video Library features over 1,000 videos that have recently been reviewed by members of the FTG Board of Governors to ensure the highest level of quality.

We are updating the Silver Award Manual with new step-by-step instructional photos and an addition of three saltwater flies.

The Second Annual Fly Tying Challenge has ended, and we will announce the winners later this year—we are grateful to our partner, Fly Tyer Magazine, for their support in facilitating another successful challenge.

FTG continues to support clubs and councils by producing a Fly of the Month—these instructions are available to member clubs and councils to download for use in their newsletters or other media.

Looking ahead, we have many exciting pieces in production, including a Fly Tying Instructor and Demonstration Tier workshop, and a Beginner Fly Tying Manual, which features step-by-step instruction for ten beginner flies. These pieces can help clubs, councils, or individual members teach a fly tying class; this valuable resource will be available on the Learning Center soon. We look forward to engaging more with members by taking recommendations for flies to feature and other tools that the FTG can provide.
BRINGING FFI ONLINE HAS BEEN A MAJOR FOCUS

Amid the COVID-19 pandemic, we wanted to offer engaging content to our members, and the entire fly fishing community, who have been unable to participate in face-to-face events.

We kicked off the program with Patrick Berry presenting information about the bright future of FFI. Our goal was twofold: first, we wanted to keep our members informed of the direction and vision of FFI’s future, built on the shoulders of dedicated FFI members and volunteers over the years. Second, for those new to FFI, we wanted to make sure to explain and demonstrate the importance and value of the only organization dedicated to actively preserving the Legacy of Fly Fishing for All Fish, All Waters.

In the following weeks, we hosted a variety of online experiences engineered to be both educational and compelling for audiences throughout the fly fishing community. These events included:

» Global Fly Fishing enthusiast Jeff Currier delivered a series of presentations on some of the coolest places he’s fished around the world.

» Molly Semenik and some of the other all-stars from the FFI Casting Instructor Certification Program presented a series of compelling casting workshops.

» FFI Conservation Committee Chair Dave Peterson hosted a string of guests to cover some of the most high-profile conservation issues facing our fishery resources.

» Chair of the FFI Tying Group Jerry Coviello assembled a series of demonstrations on some of the more popular and interesting techniques and tips in fly tying.

» Chair of the FFI Women Connect Patty Lueken talked about this new FFI initiative to create a stronger community among women fly fishers — the fastest growing sector of the sport.

» Dutch Baughman, FFI Education Committee Chair, talked about the FFI Learning Center and the fly fishing education programs within FFI.

The previous webcasts are still available for viewing on the FFI website. We’re taking a break in the summer but stay tuned for more programming in the fall/winter of 2020-2021.
ALL FISH, ALL WATERS is not just a slogan for our organization, but a practicing philosophy that our councils and clubs regularly enact.

Our grassroots network is somewhere around the globe every day, providing education on all aspects of fly fishing in saltwater, cold water, and warm water. Councils are our regional presence for delivering programs to our members. FFI councils and members attend Fly Fishing Shows that span the US. Members give lessons on how to tie a fly, a knot, and cast a line at each show. This year, members of the Northern California Council provided a fun and comprehensive program to help attendees take the Casting Skills Challenge in Pleasanton.

You'll also find hundreds of FFI members involved in the Oregon Council Expo. The Council produces one of the largest fly tying and casting events in the Pacific Northwest. Then, go south and east to the Florida Council to experience educational opportunities to learn more about fly fishing in saltwater.

The Texas Council, the largest council in FFI, has a very active relationship with Texas Parks & Wildlife. The Texas Council provides educational resources for the department that manages resources for what is primarily a warm water state. The Texas Council has been involved in the restoration of the Llano River as well as other projects that provide opportunities for our warm water fly fishers. The also invest in saltwater fly fishing along the Gulf coast.

Fly Fishers International would not be the grassroots organization we are today without our 17 councils, and over 200 clubs, that serve our members and help people learn more about conservation of fishery resources, our sport, and improving skills to expand enjoyment of the fly fishing experience.

INTERNATIONAL PROGRAMS

The International Programs Committee completed a survey of FFI members in other countries to discover their motivations for supporting FFI. Those members revealed cultural differences between each country, but generally expressed similar interests in conservation, education in all aspects for fly fishing, and valuing an organization that represents their interests — much like members in the US.

The Board approved an “International Ambassador” designation for official recognition of members within each country. These Ambassadors will act as liaisons with the FFI Board are responsible for developing comprehensive Fly Fishers International Programs that represent and preserve the fly fishing interests of members within each country.

Three International Ambassadors were approved in January: one in Italy and two in Japan. Conversations are underway with Ambassador candidates in the United Kingdom and Australia at this time. Unfortunately, COVID-19 has slowed progress on expanding the countries our Ambassadors represent. The next steps will be to continue the support of our current Ambassadors, approve additional Ambassadors, and resume assistance in planning within their respective countries when normal operations are possible.

FFI Women Connect
The financial condition of FFI remains strong and healthy. In 2019, we strengthened our Balance Sheet (Statement of Financial Position) and performed well to our budget. Total net assets increased by 2% driven by an increase in total assets and an increase in total liabilities. Total revenue was $1,053,000 and total expenses were $1,028,000 resulting in a total profit for the year of $26K (including unrealized investment gains). We experienced an operating loss for the year of $123K due to the onboarding of the new President and CEO (which was anticipated in the budget).

This great performance is the result of continued strong revenues, safe and conservative investment of our assets, modest membership growth, and outstanding management of our expenditures. As you will see in the financial statements and reports, we are well-positioned to continue our ongoing work and strategic initiatives in the areas of Conservation, Education, and Community, while continuing to improve services for our members, clubs, councils and the fly fishing community.

Year-over-year, total revenues in 2019 grew by $162K. This increase was driven by investment gains, and increases in membership income, general income, and casting income. Operating revenues were down $68K due to decreases in fly fishing expo income, gift income, and investment income. Total expenses were up $58K from 2018 due to increased compensation costs for the new President and CEO, increased professional services costs for the financial audit, lower fly fishing expo expenses, and lower marketing and development expenses.

WHAT’S YOUR LEGACY?

THE FFI
LEE & JOAN WULFF LEGACY CIRCLE

Fly Fishers International is proud to announce the LEE & JOAN WULFF LEGACY CIRCLE, a giving program to support fly fishing education and conservation through estate plans, trusts, and bequests.

Fly Fishers International is the only organization dedicated to fostering the legacy of fly fishing for all fish in all waters through conservation, education, and community.

We’re honored to name the Legacy Circle after Lee and Joan Wulff, whose contributions to Fly Fishers International’s founding, mission, and programs have been monumental.

If you have questions or if FFI is already in your estate plans, please call FFI President and CEO, Patrick Berry who can help you with this compelling new program.
