SFF President Letter – January 2020

HAPPY NEW YEAR, Everyone,

We certainly celebrated Christmas as a Club this year. Annie Hays and her Mom: Marianne, Mandy McGarry, and Bob Burkhard put on a party to end all parties (until next year’s Party).

We had a great turn out. I think 40 or more. A good time was truly had by all. Looks like Bob may have started a family tradition.

2019 was good to us. We made a lot of new friends who became members and then better friends as we broke bread together around the fabulous spreads of food that we are famous for along with the fish stories we should be ashamed of. (Just kidding. A little exaggeration never hurt anybody.)

2020 holds a great deal of promise for us as we look forward.

Our Trash ‘N’ Treasures auction in January with that famous, infamous auctioneer Alan Sewell will generate another million laughs and hopefully some cash. Bring your items you no longer use and open your wallets for the items you can use. Please be generous. This event helps us support our Club’s outings and other events. We accept credit cards.

And how about that casting clinic that Dayle, Pat, Chris and Leigh put on for us? Dayle came all the way from California to lead it (and see family here) and then turned around and went back after it was over. Thank you Dayle! It was tremendous. And you know what? We’re going to do it again in April if we can swing it.

And FYI: you all have the reputation of being a “Friendly, Welcoming Club.” We had many visitors this year who came for the first time and joined that very night. I got two new inquiries today from men wanting to know more about us. Thank you all for receiving our guests so warmly.

In January we form our nominating committee. If I may remind you, when asked to serve, will you please say yes. I promise that your life will be enriched. It has been a pure pleasure serving with the amazing people who make up our current Board.

Never lose your sense of adventure.

News & Notes

2019 Financial Report
Treasurer Tom Gadacz reports that the Suncoast Fly Fishers had another good year, taking in more than $13,000 in income from dues, auctions, raffles, etc. And the best part is that all of it went back to members in the form of prizes, outing lunches and pavilion rentals, speakers, clinics, and rental fees for our meeting room at Walter Fuller Park. Oh, and don’t forget donuts and coffee at the meetings.

Update on the website update
SFF member Dennis Marquis has been diligently working on a complete redesign of the club website. He reported to the board that progress is proceeding from an entirely new home page and all the click-throughs. There’ll be more pictures of fish, and a “roaring series” of pictures that can be changed often. (Well, yeah) Dennis is working with web designer Craig Smother who also creates and ties the most beautiful flies.

The Mayfly Project. Teach fly fishing to kids in our foster care system
In case you missed it, Scott Russell spoke at our November club meeting about The Mayfly Project (TMP). TMP is a non-profit that uses fly fishing to mentor some of the 415,000 youth that are in our foster care system on any given day. They are launching their first project in Florida here in St. Petersburg in 2020! Scott is looking to round out their team of 8 mentors to participate in the project. The 2 to 4 hour outings will be on the weekends of March 14th, March 28th, April 11th, May 2nd and May 16th. The outings will teach casting, knot tying, fly tying, safety, proper setting/catching/releasing, and conservation. While learning, the mentees earn participation buttons and receive all the gear needed to continue the sport of fly fishing!Scott mentioned that the team will be mentoring 6 youth from 2 local Salvation Army group homes. He also spoke about what mentors can expect and how much fun he has heard mentors have had participating in other projects around the country.

To learn more about The Mayfly Project, go to www.themayflyproject.com. If you are interested in being a mentor and/or learning about other opportunities to get involved in the St. Petersburg project, contact Scott Russell at 727-403-8165 or at russellti@me.com.

The SFF’s first annual Ugly Sweater Christmas Potluck was a huge success. About 60 people, including members and their significant others, attended the Dec. 20 event at Gulfport’s Most Holy Name of Jesus Catholic Church’s social hall.

The evening began with a sumptuous potluck feast. I think everyone’s favorite dish was the spiced carrot bowl. Other highlights included scalloped potatoes, Greek salad, deviled eggs, cheesecake, red velvet cake, a fruit tart, and lemon cookies. I don’t dare speculate on what was homemade and what was store bought, but I will say that if my guesses are correct, then we have some wonderful chefs in our midst.

After indulging in far too much food, partygoers who brought gifts for the White Elephant Christmas participated in the game. Hopefully no feelings were hurt as several of the gifts were stolen multiple times. Some of the most hotly contested presents included fly boxes with assorted flies, a Santa figurine, a scented candle, and assorted chocolates.

I hope everyone was able to pick up one of Mandy’s adorable homemade ornaments. They are slices of wood with a sticker of a bass in a Santa hat that says “Merry Fishmas.” Mine will adorn my Christmas tree for years to come.

I’d like to thank Bob Burkard, Mandy McGarry, Tom Gadacz, George Haseltine, Bill AuCoin, and my mother, Marianne Hays, for helping me plan and execute the event. This was a team effort that could not have happened without all of you. I’d also like to thank Most Holy Name of Jesus for allowing us to rent the space on short notice as our original venue canceled on us.

Finally, the main event of the evening was the ugly sweater contest. George Haseltine won with his Christmas gorilla sweater. I believe what won the hearts of the cheering voters was his Tarzan impression in which he beat his chest while yelling.

Pat Damico: Casting Clinic

In spite of the early wind and rain, 43 Fly Fishers International members from Fly Fishing Clubs as far as Crystal River joined members of Tampa Bay Fly Fishing Club, the event sponsor, and Suncoast Fly Fishers, St. Petersburg, at Woodlawn Park, Saturday, Dec. 14 from 8 am to 3 pm to improve fly casting and fly fishing skills.

Sessions were conducted by Dayle Mazzarella, lead instructor assisted by Pat Damico, both FFI Master Certified, Chris O’Byrne, Certified Instructor Leigh West, and Lisa Lowman well-known area award-winning fly fishers.

The session was free to all FFI members and others paid a $35.00 fee and received a FFI membership. These clinics are a benefit to all active FFI members.

(Editor’s note: The casting clinics were initiated by Pat Damico and the Suncoast Fly Fishers beginning in 2007 and are now co-sponsored with the Tampa Bay Fly Fishing Club.)

Beginners, as well as advanced students, learned and practiced the skills that make fly fishing more enjoyable and productive. Fundamental, as well as advanced techniques, were applied to practical local fishing conditions including brisk wind which was present most of the day. Accuracy, distance, line control, selection of equipment and fly rigging were also emphasized.

Volunteers from Tampa Bay Fly Fishing Club provided coffee, cold drinks, breakfast, and lunch. Check Facebook and websites of both Clubs for future events, monthly meetings, and fishing get-togethers.

January 18 Outing. Weedon Island Preserve

By Bob Burkard, outing committee chairman

This location is one of our members favorite fishing destinations, an outing where you can wade, kayak, or fish by boat. Our outing prize goes to the angler catching the longest snook. But you’ll very likely get a seatrout or a ladyfish that could take the lead in our 2020 outing tournament. (Measure it. Shoot a picture and email it to Bill AuCoin – wmaucoin@verizon.net and enter it in the club’s annual outing tournament.)

We’ll meet at 11:30 at the picnic pavilion which is a short walk to the north of the Weedon Island Preserve parking lot. Come hungry. John Craig will make his famous Low Country Boil with shrimp, sausage, potatoes. And Old Bay Seasoning.

Directions:
• Take Gandy Boulevard East
• About one mile east of 4th Street North turn right (south) on San Martin Blvd N.E (just east of the Dog Track) Turn left at the sign onto Weedon Drive N.E.
• Turn left at the entrance to the preserve then continue to visitor’s center or to the kayak launch turnaround.

The colorful history of Weedon Island includes homesteaders, speakeasies, a Hollywood movie studio, and a 1930s airport. Weedon Island Preserve’s rich human history began with prehistoric peoples who thrived on the abundant fish, shellfish, plants, and mammals of the wetlands, islands and estuaries of Tampa Bay. These people evolved into the Weeden (alternate spelling) Island culture that lasted some 800 years. Weedon Island Preserve is owned by the citizens of Florida and managed by Pinellas County government. Weedonislandpreserve.org
Smitty’s Fly Box : Mangrove Snook Fly

This is my adaptation of Jim Grace’s Mangrove Snook Fly from Lefty Kreh’s book Saltwater Fly Patterns.

Materials:

Hook: Mustad 3407 sizes #2 - 1/0

Thread: White Flatwaxed Nylon

Tail: White bucktail about 2” long (tapered)

Wing: 4 to 6 white neck or wide saddle hackle feathers 2 1/2 to 3 inches long

Flash: 4 strands of Krystal Flash and 3 strands of micro Flashabou

Cheeks & Belly: White Fish Hair (tapered) or white bucktail topping: 6 strands of Peacock Herl

Head: White Flatwaxed Nylon (built up)

Eyes: 5/32” flat or 3D molded silver holographic eyes

Coating: UV Resin

Weedguard: (Optional) #1 trolling wire or 20# mono

Tying Sequence:

Step 1: Base wrap hook shank. NOTE If using a weedguard, tie in as you do this step.

Step 2: Measure and tie in bucktail at hook point.

Step 3: Tie in 2 or 3 hackles on each side, tented over bucktail. (Flatten stems to help feathers stay positioned correctly).

 Tenting the wing is tying the hackle feathers in at 11 o’clock and 1 o’clock positions on the hook shank. When looked at from either end of the fly, the feathers should assume this shape “^” over the bucktail.

Step 4: Tie in Krystal Flash at its mid-point and extend back on either side of fly ... Repeat with Flashabou.

Step 5: Tie in small bunch of Fish Hair or white bucktail (tapered) on both lower sides of hook as cheeks and belly.

Step 6: Tie in Peacock Herl topping (same length as wing).

Step 7: Build up thread head and apply eyes.

Step 8: Coat head with Softex (or epoxy). Let dry then re-coat head with Sally Hansen’s Hard As Nails.

Smitty
Materials

Hook- 1 or 1/0 3407 or stingers, etc.

Eyes- Medium barbell eyes and or bead chain

Body- Top- gray Steve Farrar Slinky Fiber

Body- Under, white Steve Farrar Slinky Fiber

Thread- Gray flat-waxed or whatever. Mono works here, too.

Flash- Optional.. Steve Farrar Slinky Fiber has sparkly fibers in it

Epoxy- UV epoxy and curing light. Sally Hansen top coat can be applied to remove stickiness of cured epoxy

Glue- Super glue (aka head cement), Zap a Gap, etc.. I like brush-on nail glue.

Sequence

Note! this is a standard CLOUSER PATTERN. but with different materials.

1. Wrap thread from hook eye to bend, bring thread to front

2. Attach barbell eyes to top of hook about 1/4 to 3/8th inch behind hook eye. Use figure 8 wraps 3-4 times, then 2-under/over wraps to secure eyes. Some tiers add some super glue to firmly secure eyes.

3. Add a small clump of white Steve Farrar material. Start in front of eyes then tie down material behind eyes several wraps on each side of barbell eyes.

4. Rotate fly so white material is on top then add a large clump of gray sf material in front of the eyes and tie in front of eyes only.. Material should be slightly more than the white belly material, but still you should still be able to see through the gray stuff.

5. Whip finish the front of the fly to a tapered head.

6. Apply epoxy glue to cover thread and barbell eyes.

Bruce Evensen's Mullet Clouser This is Bruce's recommended fly for the January outing at Weedon Island Preserve. The outing prize goes to the longest snook. Snook are likely to be huddled in the warmest water which is often the water over dark, muddy, deep bottoms. Tie on this Clouser. "Jig" it slowly close to the bottom.
On Monday, January 6
Bruce led fly tiers
through the steps of his

Howdy and Happy New Year! This past holiday week I was at the in-laws for Christmas and I was lucky enough to sneak in some fly-fishing between rainstorms. The local lake and ponds around their home holds tons of freshwater fish. I managed to average 20 fish each session. Mostly small Largemouth Bass and Bluegills, all on little poppers. But each were a welcomed Christmas Miracle. If you are like me, you just want to catch fish. No matter what size.

At the end of the week I took a drive from Ft. Myers (to another family member) all the way to Miami on the Tamiami Trail and Loop Road, in search of my first Peacock Bass. Since the rain was steady for most of the week, I was expecting a soaked muddy trail, but to my delight the trail was dry and the day was nice.

Starting just after sunrise on Loop Road, I sat and watched the water for a bit before deciding to rig my 5-wt with some bass flies. On the first spot in open water I caught 14 fish (again LMB and various pan fish) until the friendly neighborhood gator showed his face to me and I moved on to the next open water and repeated my strategy. This went on for miles and miles. At some point the sun was high and the Largemouth stopped eating what I was dishing out and I was yet to catch a decent exotic. Then, I found a spot with a deep hole just past shore and shallows where I saw a ton of Oscars just schooled up. I put on a small Bonefish fly and pulled out what seemed to be every single one out of the school. I have caught a ton of Cichlids this past year but never had the pleasure of catching an Oscar until this moment. Each one of these freshwater Tripletails fight hard and it was some of the most fun I have had fishing.

Not being content without a Peacock Bass on a fly, I made my way into the dreaded South Florida traffic nightmares. I had a few spots marked on my GPS for Peas that my brother had sent me. The first three produced notta for me and I decided to hit one more before it was dark.

Alas, I tossed a Clouser under a bridge overpass in a neighborhood canal and ...POW, the Peacocks were hungry. I think they would have eaten a bare hook. These babies are so ferocious it made me freak out stripping my line and watching multiples chase it. Peacocks are a blast! I am jealous of our neighbors to the East just a little bit.

Until next month, throw all the flies you have at fish you see and as always...

Strip-----Strip-----Strip----- Tim
I took Tim Elms fishing on my boat. I was hoping for one of those 30+ trout days I’ve been blessed to have many times in the past year, it didn’t happen. The tide and as a result, the movement of water, just wasn’t right.

After fishing close to two hours, the day was looking bleak and my eyes were getting sore from continually scanning the surface for some small sign of life. I even took to quietly praying on the stern, which I don’t believe Tim even knew.

Then off the port side several hundred yards away the water erupted. I told Tim to pull up and we headed over. I believe I almost knock him off the bow in the process. We quickly got in place and Tim made a cast resulting in an immediate hook up followed by him landing this tiny Spanish Mackerel. Tim is a big man with large hands, so the Mackerel looked even smaller in his palms. Not wanting to miss the action I turn away from him and started to fish. I figured he release it and get back to business. After several blank retrieves, I glanced to the bow and noticed Tim wasn’t back to fishing. He was still sitting on the console seat admiring that little Mackerel. Muttering, “Look how beautiful it is”.

I stopped fishing, and asked him what was going on. Tim looked up at me and say “This is my first Spanish Mackerel on the fly.” How many times have you landed your first fish of a species on the fly? Wasn’t it special? You probably didn’t forget it for some time. I smiled and agreed with him, Spanish Mackerel are pretty. Tim eventually got back to fishing, caught 3 more before I hooked up. I wasn’t happy. I don’t enjoy when others out fish me on my own boat (did I just admit that?). I did something drastic. I tied on an ugly pink and yellow Clouser and 3 pink and yellow Clousers later I was up to a dozen and more importantly, out fishing Tim who only fishes one fly, a modified DT Special.

We had a lot of fun for about 45 minutes. Tim was on the bow facing port with the sun over his right shoulder and he could see the mackerel chasing my fly as I stripped. I was facing the bow with the sun in my eyes and could not see a thing. Tim supplied a strike-by-strike commentary. In several cases, he called the hook up before I made it.

They seemed to be holding in a deep hole just a cast distance from where we sunk the power pole. It was fun and salvaged the day. All kidding aside, I was glad I was able to introduce Tim to a new species. His smile was genuine and mine, as a result, was too.

Teaser: After the Mackerel mayhem, I took Tim to a new spot I have never fished before, but from secret intelligence, I suspected would hold fish. Ask Tim if you don’t believe me, we saw mega schools of reds and snook and sheep head too. Unfortunately, we could not get them to bite the fly. I have to figure this out. Tim and I cut our fingers, shared blood and promised not to divulge the spot until we figured out its hidden riddle.

Steve Udovich: Bonefish -- Cheaper by the Dozen

I had three days of good fishing at Two Boys Lodge on Andros Island in the Bahamas. This was my second trip, and not my last for sure. I had a few double digit days with a dozen bonefish on one day and 13 more the next. Given that my casting is slightly below average, it’s safe to say a better fly caster would’ve hooked more, no doubt.

That said, mark my words: There’s bonefish a plenty in Andros.

I strongly recommend Two Boys Lodge if you want to give Andros bones a try. Simple accommodations, great home cooked meals, and competent guides. Feel free to contact me if you want more info on Two Boys. I’d be glad to give you some tips to help make your trip a success. Contact: beachmanok2002@gmail.com

Cheers....

Robert Fischer: Homosassa Redfish and Seatrout

I caught 4 slot sized redfish and 3 smaller ones, plus a few trout while fishing with Capt. Bryon Chamberlin on a perfect winters day.

They were in shallow water near Homosassa Springs. I used Bruce Evenson’s redfish fly. This is the same fly that worked very well for me in the salt marshes of Louisiana.

Bill AuCoin has never-used saltwater 9-weight. $90
It’s a Falcon Made-in-America rod. When introduced in 2003 it retailed at $200+. Here’s a link to an article at that time in Saltwater Sportsman. It’s medium fast, loads smoothly, and can throw big poppers and wet-heavy flies. It’s no longer under warranty. Falcon stopped making fly rods a few years ago to focus on casting and spinning rods. Sock and tube included. Bill will bring it to the January outing if you want to check it out. Email Bill at wmaucin@verizon.net

Fly fishing in the Wind

When clients make initial contact, especially this time of year, they want to know how the fishing will be the day or days of their future charter. I can give them general information about what species are available and where we will be fishing. The unknown is the weather.

There have been recent consecutive days when the wind especially has been brutal. Combine this with fluctuating water temperatures, heavy rain and muddy water and you have less than ideal fishing conditions, especially with a fly rod. With new clients, the other unknown is their fly casting ability, which is frequently exaggerated. If most of their previous experience has been fishing tiny flies in a small freshwater creek in a protected wooded valley where 15 foot casts with a 4 weight rod are considered long, a prescription for disappointment is beginning to form.

We have a lot of open water, but also have many protected areas where cooperative trout, ladyfish, jacks, small snook, mackerel and other less choosy fish are in good numbers. Canals, creeks, narrow channels, even protected by buildings and mangrove protected shorelines are all good options. Wind direction must constantly be monitored while fishing to have the best chance for success.

Bill Scarola and friends: Drum Rolls Please

- If this is the first time you’re herring about it, this is the o-fish-all fly tying email.

- It may not be very so fish-ticated, but any fin is possible.

- If you think this is a load of carp, I plead gill-ty.

- Here’s a great oppor - tuna- ty to laugh at the puns you’ve been "herring” about!

- People say a scarecrow is outstanding in his field. But, hay, it’s in his jeans.

- Did you hear that Han Sole-o went fishing with (wait for it) Darth-Baiter?

Bill AuCoin: Flyfisher Flyover

Save the date: June 1, 2020. But why?
Because that’s when we can keep slot-sized redfish (18–27 inches) and seatrout (15–19 inches, and one over 19 inches). For snook (28–33 inches), we’ll probably have to wait for the traditional three-month fall season to open September 1. This ruling applies in state waters from the Pasco/Hernando county lines all the way south to the other side of Gordon Pass in Collier County. (The Fishing Wire)

What is your pet peeve?
It just seems to me that saltwater fly fishing (versus freshwater fly fishing) is a much bigger category than it gets credit for in the industry. I recently came across this report and I think it confirms my bias. Sort of. It’s a long read but here are a couple of takeaways. South Atlantic fly fishers (mostly salty fly fishers, right?) account for 20 percent of fly fishers. Mountain fly fishers total only 6 percent. Or, is this just wishful reading? (Brandon Gaille)

Dave Whitlock, is that you?
I spent the holidays with family in the Denver area and it gave me a chance to take in a well-known fly fishing show. One of the more popular exhibits was Dave & Emily Whitlock Fly Fishing where fly fishers were gobbling up Dave’s books, original flies, photography, artwork, etc., then standing in line for his autograph. I had the privilege of fly fishing with Dave on the White River in Arkansas many years ago. He has since moved back to his native state, Oklahoma, where he has doubled down as an artist/photographer/writer who creates inspiring works for fly fishers. (Davewhitelock.com)

Is this the best looking fly reel?
Browsing the show at the Denver Mart my grandson and I spent a few minutes admiring the new Abel reels. Take a look at the new saltwater SDS. Yeah, it costs $1,000 or so but, hey, that bonefish artwork seals the deal, right? And, when you die, it goes to your grandson. Two-three months ago at the AFFTA fly fishing trade show Abel’s new VAYA reel was named the best saltwater reel. That model costs “only” $500 but it doesn’t have a sealed drag. Is a sealed drag really necessary for saltwater fishing? I really don’t know. (Abel Reels)

Problem. Solution? Maybe.
Almost every summer since 2000, an algae named Pyrodinium has stained Old Tampa Bay with a reddish hue. Similar to Florida Red Tide (Karenia brevis) currently threatening Pinellas beaches, Pyrodinium produces potent toxins that can pose a health risk to humans and wildlife if consumed. Pyrodinium also reduces clarity in the water and can cause fish kills as it biodegrades and depletes dissolved oxygen. (The Fishing Wire)

New Year’s Resolution
I came across this old article recently and I hereby want to declare to fellow club members that I have set a goal to try to catch a few mullet on the fly. I hooked one recently in the mouth and, omg, I thought I was battling a redfish. Question one: which fly should I tie? (FlyLife)
